July 2017 King Tides

King Tides are simply the very highest tides of the year. They are naturally occurring, predictable events associated with the alignment of the moon and the sun orbits to maximize the gravitational pull on the earth. In Hawai'i these typically occur in the summer months (June and July and December and January.

Are these new this year for Hawaii?

No. King Tides is a non-scientific term that applies to the highest astronomical tides of the year, typically occurring around new or full moons. This year the highest tides are May 25-26, June 23-24, July 21-22.

Why are we hearing so much about them this year then?

The observed water levels have been running 3-6 inches above predicted tidal heights. The elevated water levels combined with active swells and the larger tides have the potential to create coastal erosion, wave over-wash, nuisance flooding for low lying areas, and near storm drain systems.

The highest astronomical (lunar) tides of the year will occur on July 21-22, which is typical of this time of year (see Tide Chart below). However, what is unusual is that Hawaii continues to experience about five to six inches of elevated water level, on top of predicted tides. The elevated sea levels, 6-10 inches higher than forecast have been observed in tide gauge and satellite data since early 2016 are expected to persist through this summer.

- A record high (non-storm) water level was measured at the Honolulu tide gauge in April, May and June, 2017.
 Similar water levels are expected with the July king tides.
- The elevated water levels are due to short-term oceanic variability in addition to long-term global sea level rise. The elevated water levels are occurring statewide but vary somewhat from month to month among the islands.

• Impacts in the July King Tide are expected to be localized and similar to the April, May and June high tides, which also coincided with south swell, affecting low-lying shoreline areas that have experienced overwash, flooding, and beach erosion in the past, particularly on south-facing shores.

What are the potential impacts?

- Flooding at the shoreline will depend largely on wave conditions
- Highest waves during this time of year typically occur on south and windward coasts
- Localized impacts may include:
 - Coastal erosion
 - Wave over-wash and flooding, particularly on south and windward coasts
 - Temporary ponding in low-lying areas
 - Reduced drainage and flooding around coastal storm drains
 - Impeded beach access, with hazardous conditions possible

Over the Rainbow at Hilton Hawaiian Village

Package offers an added value vacation in a Waikiki landmark

Through 2017, visitors can stay in one of the most iconic towers in all of Waikiki and enjoy a selection of thoughtful amenities with Hilton Hawaiian Village Waikiki Beach Resort's "Over the Rainbow" package. Over the Rainbow starts any vacation off right with a room in the Rainbow Tower – known for its dazzling rainbow mosaic panels and views overlooking Waikiki's widest stretch of beach and the Duke Kahanamoku Lagoon. Guests can slide into vacation mode with two complimentary cocktails at any of the village's signature bars including Tapa Bar, Hau Tree Bar or Paradise Lounge. Then, vacationers will be prepared to enjoy the Hawaiian sun and hit the beach with two fedora hats and a special edition Hilton Hawaiian Village beach bag.

After a multi-million dollar restoration project, a redone mural faithful to the original artwork was unveiled in 2014. The restored mural is made up of more than 31,000 tiles and includes added artwork by Sheets' son, Tony Sheets, at the base of the mountainfacing side of the tower.

An equally famous sight at the Hilton Hawaiian Village are the weekly Friday night fireworks that light up the Waikiki skyline. For the most spectacular experience however, guests should launch into the weekend with The Show features exciting hula performances and a finale of torch lights and drums, all synced in time with the fireworks and the iconic song "Over the Rainbow." Guests should also be sure to stop by the village's new logo shop, Anuenue, which opened on June 15, 2017. A large selection of rainbow-themed and custom logo items are available for purchase.

Makana presented to HOKULEA crew on world-circling Mālama Honua oyae on display at Hawai'i Convention Center

New exhibit coincides with long-distance voyaging canoe's Hawaii homecoming celebration

A ceremonial stone kava bowl presented to crewmembers of Hokulea on their 2014 visit to Maupiti atoll in French Polynesia. A wood root club offered to the crew by members of the Penobscot Nation of the Wabanaki Peoples in Maine and an intricately detailed model of Hokulea – right down to the vessel's solar panels and rigging – presented on the canoe's Martha's Vineyard visit during travels along the Atlantic Coast of the United States in 2016. And a multicolored, hand-sewn mola textile art panel, representative of the indigenous peoples of Panama, gifted to the long-distance Polynesian voyaging canoe's crew in January upon docking in Balboa.

All of the above are makana (gifts) presented to the 245 rotating crewmembers of Hokulea on the vessel's three-year Malama Honua Worldwide Voyage. And you can now see each up-close in the new display, Malama Honua: The Worldwide Voyage of Hokulea, 2013-2017, at the Hawaii Convention Center (HCC). The exhibit coincides with Hokulea's Lei Kaapuni Honua grand homecoming ceremony and celebration at Ala Moana Beach Park's Magic Island, this past Saturday.

The display, which also includes items collected by the Polynesian Voyaging Society from Hokulea's four-decade voyaging history, as well as related photographs, maps and lithographs from the Bernice Pauahi Bishop Museum, is a preview of a larger Holo Moana: Generations of Voyaging exhibit set to debut at the Oahu museum in November. The Hawaii Convention Center display, which will be housed on the third level for two years, is a collaborative project of the convention center, Bishop Museum and the Polynesian Voyaging Society.

Hokulea items in the center's display are divided into three educational sections related to the canoe: its 2013-17 Malama Honua worldwide voyage; the traditional wayfinding knowledge taught, learned and practiced by crewmembers on Hokulea's voyages; and the work of the nonprofit research-and education-focused Polynesian Voyaging Society, which conceived Hokulea's construction, mission and voyages. In addition to the makana above – which represents a mere fraction of the many gifts presented to crew on Hokulea's Malama Honua dockings at more than 151 ports in 23 nations on five continents – the display also includes a wood boomerang gifted on a summer 2015 Australian port of call and a Mālama Honua-themed Tutudesk lap desk (part of a desks-for-students initiative named in honor of social rights activist Archbishop Desmond Tutu) designed for school children in South Africa.

Items in the display illustrating the use of traditional wayfinding techniques on Hokulea voyages include a Marshallese wood, shell and fiber-constructed stick chart representing the patterns of prominent ocean swells and ways in which islands and atolls disrupted those patterns; and a star compass created by Hokulea master navigator Nainoa Thompson to help apprentice navigators memorize and understand the skill of wayfinding by stars. Items from the Polynesian Voyaging Society straight out of Hokulea's voyaging history include one of the canoe's life preservers and a paddle from its 1976 maiden voyage to Tahiti, an ukulele played by crew members on the canoe's Pacific Ocean voyages, and a substantial, intricately-woven strand of kaula (cordage) crafted by Hokulea's first master navigator Pius "Mau" Piailug.

For more information on the Malama Honua: The Worldwide Voyage of Hokulea display at the Hawaii Convention Center, call 808-943-3500.

Renowned nature artist Patrick Ching, who is known for his stunning seascape and wildlife pieces, brings his 5th Annual Kai Art Event to the Moana Surfrider, A Westin Resort & Spa in July. The event, sponsored jointly by the hotel and Martin & MacArthur, will feature Ching painting in the hotel lobby between 10 a.m. and 8 p.m. daily (breaks are between 2 and 4 p.m.) through Sunday, July 16.

During this time, Ching will complete six original paintings which will be available for purchase with prices starting at $2,500 each. Each purchase of an original during the Kai Art Event comes with a bonus giclee valued at $250.

In addition, Ching will be providing classes on how to paint honu (sea turtles) at the Moana Surfrider on July 6 and 13 from 2 to 4 p.m. The cost of the lessons is $20, and reservations for the lessons can be made through Ching. As part of the Kai Art Event, he'll also be offering monk seal painting classes at the Waikiki Aquarium on Sunday, July 9 from 10 a.m. to noon, and that same day seal and honu drawing classes at the Sheraton Waikiki from 4 to 5 p.m. A portion of the proceeds from the Kai Art Event will go to the Waikiki Aquarium.

"My work captures the natural beauty of Hawaii," says Ching, who is a former ranger for the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service. "Guests often tell me my paintings add that perfect touch of Hawaii to their homes, and are reminders of their time in the islands."

Martin & MacArthur, Hawaii's premier fine furniture maker and purveyor of exquisite furnishings, has been a sponsor of Ching's shows for many years. Martin & MacArthur President and CEO Michael Tam says, "It's our pleasure to support the most talented craftsmen and artists in Hawaii. This 5th Annual Kai Art Event also happens during the Year of the Monk Seal – a time to celebrate and appreciate these gentle creatures."

Tuesdays Blayne Asing

Singer/songwriter Blayne Asing began playing `ukulele at age eight. He grew up loving music of popular Hawai`i musicians, but his own music is heavily influenced by country artists, James Taylor and Jackson Browne.

Asing had no formal music training. He taught himself how to play by watching YouTube videos. He credits his ability to play with having a natural ear for learning.
